CONTENTS

ARTICLES

- Direct Broadcast Satellites: The
Conceptual Convergence of the Free Flow of Information and National Sovereignty
Jon T. Powell 1
- In this article, the author describes the valid but conflicting interests of certain nations with respect to direct broadcast satellites. He highlights the view of some nations, notably the United States, that peoples in general have a right to freely receive information transmitted from all sources. Against this he pits an opposing view that such transmission may violate the national sovereignty of the receiving country. He concludes that in the interest of peace, the rapidly advancing technology of man necessitates continuous efforts towards an effective balance of these views.
- The Guatemala Protocol to the Warsaw Convention
Robert P. Boyle 41
- The author discusses, on an article-by-article basis, the aviation law changes made to the provisions of the Warsaw Convention by the Guatemala Protocol. In addition, he points out the most difficult problems which will have to be surmounted before the United States can ratify the Protocol.
- Aviation Law: International
Air Travel—A Brief
Diagnosis and Prognosis
John J. Kennelly 86
- Through the use of realistic but hypothetical examples, the author illuminates inequities in existing aviation treaties which limit monetary recovery for injury to, or death of, passengers. After describing means by which sophisticated air travelers can avoid application of these treaties, he urges that radical changes be made to protect the interests of the passenger public and aviation industry.
- ### COMMENTS
- Mental Privacy: An International
Safeguard to Governmental Intrusions into the Mental Processes
