- Trans-Boundary Pollution Injuries: Jurisdictional Considerations in Private Litigation between Canada and the United States
Stephen C. McCaffrey ..... 191
- Recognizing the transnational character of water and air pollution, the author delineates the possible avenues open to a private litigant attempting to establish jurisdiction in either Canada or the United States for the purpose of securing restitution. The United States and Canadian case law as well as each country's applicable statutes are reviewed to map the most pragmatic course to the courts of either country.
- Judges under the Shadow: Judicial Independence in the United States and Mexico Carl Schwarz ..... 260
- The misconception of Mexican judicial submission to the executive branch of the Mexican government is dispelled by the author's in depth analysis of the Mexican federal courts as they compare to their counterparts in the United States. Emphasizing Supreme Court decisions, the independence of each judiciary in certain issue areas is dissected in light of the judicial abstinence doctrines of "political questions" and "committed-to-agency-discretion."
- International Charter Flight Strandings: A Proposal for Multinational Regulation
S. Houston Lay & Anthony F. Menke ..... 333
- Mass strandings of international charter flight passengers due to black market charter operations dramatically document the lack of a viable organization through which international charter flight operations can be regulated. A history of the charter industry including its present dilemma and a survey of current domestic charter regulations demonstrate the need for and feasibility of an International Charter Enforcement Organization which would competently oversee international charter operations.
