- An Evolving International Legal Norm of Religious Freedom: Problems and Prospects
Stephen C. Neff..... 543

Exploring the concept of freedom of religion and the lack of a precise definition in this area, the author begins with an historical analysis and proceeds to discuss the various methods the international legal community has evolved to foster the goal of religious freedom. Further discussion centers around post-World War II developments in the area of religious discrimination, and the United Nations' "universalistic" approach as expounded in the preliminary draft of the Declaration on the Elimination of all Forms of Religious Intolerance. The article concludes with comments concerning the future of religious freedom.

- The United Nations and The International Protection of Human Rights: A Legal Analysis and Interpretation
V. Voitto Saario and Rosemary Higgins Cass..... 591

Analyzing the relationship between human rights and international agreements, the authors discuss the modern origins for the international protection of human rights, the development of this concept by the United Nations, and implementation and enforcement problems encountered under existing international law. The conclusion includes a proposal for the establishment of an international court with compulsory jurisdiction to protect human rights.

- The Credentials Approach to Representation Questions in the United Nations General Assembly
Farrokh Jhabvala..... 615

Taking the position that "rules" regarding representation of a state in the United Nations General Assembly involve political decisions by member states, the author attempts to clarify some of the issues and controversies involved. The author concludes that the recognition accorded to states and governments in the United Nations is linked to representation in the General Assembly. The need for settled rules in this sensitive area of dealing with the relationships between states and international organizations is emphasized.
